Woman's Column.

A Western woman, Dr. E. T. Judd, seems to have given the subject of woman's suffrage some attention from a physician's standpoint. While her arguments are by no means new, there is much that is true in what she says, and it will do us no harm to give thoughtful attention to her words:

How many times we hear some enthusiastic woman express her opinion that the world would soon be better, and all of the evils of intemperance, vice, political iniquity, etc., be done away with if only women could vote.

As a physician, I have been a close observer in many homes, and I am convinced that in every instance where the mother spent her time in the endeavor to help along suffrage, by attending mother's councils, women's clubs, etc., leaving her children meanwhile to the care and education of servants and the street teachers that are so plenty, that she was not obeying God's command to "train up a child in the way he should go," and by neglecting to do so she was injuring the work of progress in the world, far more than she was helping it.

The home is the foundation of all good citizenship, and to the mother is given the responsibility of instilling the first principles of everything, good or bad, into the mind of the child, and I fully believe if women would take this for their field of work and labor to teach their sons and daughters the true ideas of a pure government, that there would not be many generations before the desired change in public affairs would be a fact.

In that time, the boys would have learned to so appreciate the worth and ability of their mothers, that there would be no question of sex when offices of trust were to be filled.

There is no other way by which we can persuade the men—the present lawmakers—that we are fit to fill these offices, or to vote for others to fill them, except we begin when they are boys—very young boys—and train them up as they should go. If you, and you, and you, my sisters, think you are fit to govern the country and make the laws, you must first prove that you are able to govern yourself and your children; to know what is best and to live up to your belief. Unless you can prove this, you will never succeed in persuading or driving men to give you the right of suffrage, no, even though you let your family go to ruin while you are attending conventions and caucuses and reading long speeches on women's rights.

How To Find Out. Fill a bottle or common water glass with urine and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates a diseased condition of the kidneys. When urine stains linen it is positive evidence of kidney trouble. Too frequent desire to urinate or pain in the back, is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

WATER TO DO. There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills every wish in relieving pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passages. It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes the unpleasant necessity of being compelled to get up many times during the night to urinate. The mild and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. Let your doctor, or medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists, price fifty cents and one dollar. For a sample bottle and pamphlet, both sent free by mail, mention OXFORD COUNTY ADVERTISER and send your full post-office address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The proprietors of this paper guarantee the genuineness of this offer.

Mrs. Frank Eastman of East Conway and her two boys, Fred and Richard, from Paris, were served at Smith & Warren Hall, both days by the ladies of the church.

Food undigested is poison. Digested it is life and strength. Millions of us suffer from indigestion, but we often don't know it. We think it is something else. Even doctors often mistake the symptoms.

Pale, thin people, who are overworked, who need strength, who seem in want of proper food, should take Shaker Digestive Cordial. It is astonishing what food will do, when properly digested.

It will make you strong, revive you, refresh you, sustain you, make you fat, restore your color, make muscle, brain force, courage, endurance, energy; increase your power to throw off disease and keep you healthy and happy.

Sold by druggists. Trial bottle 10 cts.

There will be dancing at society hall, on the fair grounds South Harrison, July 3, afternoon and evenings.

Marvelous Results. From a letter written by Rev. J. G. Gundersen, of Dinwiddie, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at River Junction, Mich., she was brought down with Pneumonia succeeding La Grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." Trial bottles free at Noyes Drug Store, Norway, and Shurtlett's Pharmacy, South Paris. Regular size 50c. and $1.00.

POTTER ACADEMY. After the close of exercises at Potter Academy at Sebaste, Thursday, the trustees held a session. Mr. Guire and Mr. Stone were both applicants for principal for the next year. Mr. Stone was finally chosen.

Miss Mary E. Small, one of the assistants, does not intend to teach any longer, but unless she positively declines the trustees will try to keep her another year.

The dormitory question, which was to have been considered again by the trustees, was lost sight of owing to other questions that now engage their attention and also owing to some complications.

The County Commissioners have returned from their trip into the north of the county. While there they made arrangements for the building of the big bridge at Wilson's Mills. The commissioners have charge of the State's appropriation of $1,500. E. S. Coe and the Berlin Mills Co. have each contributed $500, the latter giving it in lumber, and an equivalent has been raised by line and coin plantation. The abutments and long protection walls will be of granite, pinned together and laid in cement and the bridge will be a heavy wooden curved truss structure. A fine quarry of granite is close at hand and the lumber comes from mills nearby, so that the item of transportation of materials need not be extraordinary, and a remarkably good bridge can be constructed for the $9,000. The State's appropriation is not available till the work is far advanced, and there is a certainty of not exceeding appropriations.

The Modern "Graduate."

Humiliating indeed is the entrance upon "real life" of the modern graduate compared with the prestige attending that of his forefathers. By modern notions his "sheepskin" is a diploma of disqualification; a certificate that his possession of it is nothing of what alone is worth knowing—practical affairs—and must begin their acquisition by forgetting all that he has hitherto willingly (or unwillingly) acquired during four years of college. The "three R's" have professions, like the "three R's," have lost their old-time distinction—they are only other ways of "getting a living."

Of a truth this brought home to the graduate by the changed character of the very Commencement which ushered (or "hustled") him out of the gates of Alma Mater. His part in it is only a minor one at best, ostensible occasion, indeed, for observing the day, but actually an opportunity for the elevation of others at his expense. Commencement is still a day of "graduates," but of graduates of quite another sort—the real graduates, those old fellows who now dominate the campus, and hold a feast called the "Alumni dinner"—the appropriate climax of the whole affair. In short, the coming graduate is all crowded off what is left to him of the "Commencement stage." — [Harper's Weekly.

For a genuine Keeley Cure within the State of Maine, go to Portland, where every care is given for the benefit of the patient. While every comfort is furnished and the attractions of both nature and art are on every hand to please and aid the patient in his recovery. The main object of this excellently managed institution is to effect PERMANENT CURES. The President is a man of temperate habits and high grade of character. 29ft

Passengers down the Grand Trunk on the forenoon train now have an hour's wait in Mechanic Falls if they wish to take the train for points up the line of the P. & R. F. But for one going the other way there is from five to seven hours' wait. Accommodating the public who patronize these railroads doesn't seem to be greatly considered in making up the time tables.

Sick Headache. Neuralgia and Extreme Nervousness.

EVER since I was eighteen years old until I learned of Dr. Miles' Restorative Remedies, I suffered from sick headache and extreme nervousness and dyspepsia. In time heart disease developed. I was treated by several doctors with no relief. Severe palpitation with pain in left breast, shortness of breath, and smothering spells made me most miserable. I procured Dr. Miles' Restorative Nerve and New Heart Cure and took them alternately as directed. Improvement began at once and increased so rapidly that inside of six months I increased thirty six pounds in weight. All pain in the heart is gone, and the nervousness has wholly left me."

Mrs. CHAS. KNAPP, W. German St., Little Falls, N. Y., Nov. 7, '95.

Dr. Miles' Remedies are sold by all druggists under a positive guarantee. First bottle benefits or money refunded. Book on Heart and Nerves sent free to all applicants.

Deer are very numerous and are seen almost daily contentedly grazing in the fields or gamboling sportively like young lambs. They are likely to do damage to the crops, whether permitting any to be raised this year.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. E. Grover have returned from a trip by carriage to Montpelier, Vt., where they have been to visit their relatives. They report a very enjoyable time and are enthusiastic in their description of the scenery along the route.

The sudden death of Lucien Brown from pneumonia, Thursday, June 24, has caused much sadness in this community where he was known and respected for his integrity and obliging ways. Deceased belonged to the North Waterford Lodge of Odd Fellows, by which order he was buried. Floral contributions were numerous and beautiful. A wreath consisting of 300 panicles, presented by Maria Lebroke, was very unique and pretty. A cross and wreath from Mrs. Little and daughter of Bethel, were very lovely. He leaves a wife and two young children, a mother, widow of the late Lyman Johnson, and one sister, who deeply mourn his loss.

John Woods met with an accident in the woods, last week, having his face badly torn, while trying to remove a tree that had lodged.

The Norway Lake Woman's Club have been presented with a flag for the schoolhouse by Mrs. J. C. Bullard. There will be a flag raising and a basket picnic with a few exercises by the children in the schoolhouse grove, July 5.

There was a Sunday-school organized, last Sunday, with J. L. Partridge as superintendent; Wm. O. Perry, vice-supt.; Mrs. W. S. Partridge, sec. and treas.; Miss Quint, Miss Partridge, Mrs. Wm. O. Perry and Mrs. W. S. Partridge, teachers.

MASON.

C. L. Abbott of West Bethel was in town, last Friday.

Mrs. Blanche Mitchell of Berlin, N. H., is visiting her grandfather, J. C. Bean.

Nellie and Merton Bean returned from Hebron, last Friday. They visited while away friends at South Paris.

Z. M. Vaughan of Strong, agent for the Maine Bible Society is in town, calling on the citizens. He is making his home with J. C. Bean.

School closed, last Friday, after a very successful term of eight weeks. Miss Grover is an excellent teacher; we hear she is to teach the fall term. At the close of her school she invited the scholars to meet at her boarding place, where they had swings and croquet and other games until the sun went down behind the western hills, then a treat of ice cream, peanuts and candy was brought out and served by the teacher. Then came the adieus and partings and the happy children left for their homes, all uniting that it was the best time they ever had at the close of school.

School closed, last Friday, June 25, after a pleasant term, taught by Elizabeth I. Grover of Bethel. The scholars gave the following program in the afternoon:

Grandma's Story.....Una Lovejoy
The Music Box.....Dora Mills
The Little Chicken.....Dora Mills
The Boy Who Cried Wolf.....Albert Brown
The Bridge.....Ellie Tyler
Sliding.....Merrie Philbrook
Fussy Wilma.....Herbert Burgess
The Week of the Roses.....Ella Tyler
The Spelling Lesson.....Ellie Tyler
Johnny Speaks his Piece.....Marjorie Brown
Oster Joe.....Cristabel Brown
To My Love.....Vera Mills
Teaching Dolly.....Frances Brown
Union and Liberty.....Four girls

Schools not absent one half-day, Ella M. Tyler, Vera E. Mills, Treanna E. Brody, Una Lovejoy, J. Tyler, Dora B. Mills, Albert M. Brown, and Frank E. Mills. Schools not absent more than one day, Cristabel Brown, Elmer Morrill and Fred Lovejoy. Whole number of scholars, 18.

EAST STONEHAM.

Mr. and Mrs. John Littlefield of Bryant's Pond visited relatives and friends here, last week.

Silas Stearns has moved into his new house and will McAllister is to occupy the one Stearns vacated.

C. C. Flanders, who was rendered nearly helpless by a shock, in the spring, thinks of going to the Soldier's Home if he can possibly do so. We consider it the best measure he can take.

Some of the ladies here are desirous of renewing and reorganizing the Relief Corps. We sincerely hope they will. It is a good Order and if properly managed will do much good in the purposes for which it is intended.

A few days since, Mrs. Eliza Merrill met with a serious and painful accident by falling heavily to the floor and striking her stomach and ribs on the edge of the kitchen range, breaking some of her ribs and giving her a severe shaking up. Since then she has lain nearly helpless, unable to move, except her hands and arms, and causing her great pain to be moved. A physician was called to examine her and found her injuries, and made her as comfortable as possible. At the present time she is as comfortable as can be expected for one in her condition. But as she is a lady of 75 years, in not very good health, and quite lame before, it will require the best of nursing to insure her recovery. The accident happened as follows: She arose from her bed intending to go to the outside door, which was but a few steps distant, but in the darkness she became bewildered, dizzy, or faint (she does not know which) and going in the wrong direction fell as described.

This town was visited, last Thursday, p. m., by a heavy thunder shower. The rain came in torrents. During the shower the lightning struck a tall tree near the dwelling house of Lucien Jewett, running down and entering the ground at the foot. A branch of the tree overlapped the south corner of the house, and by this the current was communicated to the house, doing considerable damage though, strange to tell the buildings were not set on fire, and no one was injured. Entering the chamber and shattering shingles and plastering, it descended to the hallway and parlor, then to the dining-room and kitchen where Mrs. Jewett was. She was not harmed although the current passed around her quite near. Some strange freaks were played in the parlor (which was nicely finished for a country residence) such as cutting the wires and letting pictures fall, and following the gilt on the wall paper turned it black wherever it was gilt, shattering the plastering. In the pantry it capered over the shelves in a lively manner, but I have not learned that any glass or china was broken. In the chamber a cover was lifted from a jar and set down carelessly, also a chimney taken off a lamp and set down whole. We believe that there is an insurance on the buildings, which were formerly known as the Thomas Foster buildings.

HARTFORD.

Mrs. Ed Moody is sick.

John Thompson is sick.

Maud Russell has gone to Livermore to work.

Charney Osgood has lost his colt. He has been ailing for some time past, but died quite suddenly.

Mrs. Herbert Haines, son and daughter, with relatives from Hartford, D. C., field, Mexico, Ridgelyville and Peru, enjoyed a day's fishing on Worthly pond, last week. They reported a good time, with plenty of black bass if you can only catch them.

SOUTH WATERFORD.

M. Monroe is at work for B. Pike.

W. H. Haynes is building a veranda.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Bailey have gone to Portland.

S. Davis' stage commences running to South Waterford.

Mrs. C. Houghton is stopping with her daughter, Mrs. A. S. Kimball of Norway.

We understand C. R. Meserve of Norway has purchased a blacksmith shop of E. K. Kilgore.

Mrs. C. Scribner and little daughter

Mrs. Albert Green, formerly of Waterville, died at her home in Bridgton, the 21st inst. Her sister, Mrs. Lucia Whitcomb, has been taking care of her.

Some satisfaction in contemplating the fact that we shall not longer be obliged to sit up all night in order to be on hand to take the stage soon after day, light to make connection with R. R. train for outside world. Davis' stage to Bridgton commenced its regular trips, last Monday, leaving at about 8 a. m.

Large business at our butter factory at present, with a good prospect of doing the largest season's work ever performed here. Mr. Goding, who takes the place of W. E. Abbott, appears to be giving excellent satisfaction and we bespeak for all concerned a very successful business, both at Bethel and South Waterford.

A very large audience assembled at the Village Sunday last, to listen to Rev. Mr. Markley, the popular young pastor of the Universalist society in this town and in Bridgton. The day was observed as Children's Sunday, and although the regular attendance at the church is remarkably good, there were no vacant seats on this occasion. With the exception of the remarks of the pastor, which were made more especially to the children, the services were by the Sunday School, which by the way appears to be in a very prosperous condition from reports of secretary and treasurer of the same. The hall was tastefully decorated for the occasion.

Haselton-Tutbill.

Rev. William B. Tutbill of Kensing, ton, Conn., and Lillie May Haselton, both graduates of Colby University, class of '94, were married at the residence of Charles F. Ayer at Waterville, Wednesday evening, June 10. The house was appropriately decorated for the occasion and the ceremony was very beautiful and impressive as Mr. Tutbill in a conventional evening dress and Miss Haselton attired in white silk with lace trimmings, stood amidst a throng of friends before Rev. W. H. Spencer of the Baptist church and were made one.

The bride and groom went to the Pullman for Kensington, Conn., where they will make their home.

Mrs. Tutbill is a graduate of the Norway High School and is well known in Norway.

NEWRY.

Dr. C. L. Buck passed through this place on his way to Upton.

A. H. Powers will go to Minot, Saturday, July 3d, and return with his wife, the Tuesday following. Mrs. Powers has been there for her health, a month, and is very much improved.

There was a very pretty home wedding, June 24, at N. W. Frost's, when his youngest daughter, Ismay C. Frost, was united in marriage to Stephen Gaudet of P. E. I. The room was prettily decorated and the bride was dressed in pale green with a profusion of pannes. May Baker in white was bridesmaid and Charlie Frost best man. After the ceremony the friends present were treated to refreshments. J. Gaudet has bought the place formerly owned by Ames Frost. Mr. Frost has bought a farm at West Paris and will move there soon.

Greenwood-Severy.

At a home wedding in Hebron, Monday evening, June 21st, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Greenwood, their sister, Blanche L. Greenwood, was united in marriage with Vernon O. Severy of Portland. Rev. Dr. Crane, pastor of the Baptist church, Hebron, performed the ceremony, only near relatives being present. J. Herbert Greenwood, brother of the bride, acted as best man, while Edith A. Greenwood, a sister, was bridesmaid. The bride and bridesmaid were prettily attired in white muslin. The bride party stood under an arch of evergreen and flowers, where soon after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Severy received their friends. The rooms were decorated with ferns and flowers, and during the evening dainty refreshments were served. The presents were numerous and beautiful. Mr. and Mrs. Severy will leave this week for Portland, where they will make their home.

THE OTHER HOUSE

Copyright, 1897, by the United States Book Company

"Listen to me," Hugh pleaded, and his words came fast. "I have struggled against myself, but what does it matter? We are innocent, but we are condemned. My wife will not return. I am glad of it now—glad. The past is past forever. Let it go. It is you I love. Ah, dear, I know your heart is mine! There are no words needed to tell me that. Let us be happy," he said bitterly, fiercely. "Who can avow, after all, that there is anything greater in the world than the happiness of the individual? Each for himself! I tell you, the conventional society for which we would sacrifice ourselves would not understand it even if it believed in our sincerity. Let's drop the glove in its face and live only for each other."

She was still gazing at him with those deep, pain darkened eyes, and Hugh, laying his hands appealingly on her shoulders, could feel her whole body tremble.

What thoughts crucified Marian! Hugh was making this prayer to her—she stood ready to draw her into this embrace, and she was so lately left. His other appeals had been for the good—but this—this—the sadness, the horror, the pity of it!

"Let's leave this place," he continued. "Let's leave America. We'll go away, and no one need know our story!"

"No one need know!" she echoed, looking past him. "But I—I—should know. Oh, what can I say to you? You don't know what you have done. You don't know!"

She sank into a chair and bowed her head upon her clasped hands. "He did not believe me. He did not believe me," he heard her murmur in a heavy, weary tone.

"What are you saying, Marian? You believe I love you?"

"Oh, yes, I believe that!" she said fiercely, a sound that was like the echo of a bitter laugh breaking upon her lips. "Yes," she said again, rising and facing him, "I believe you give me such love as women like me are capable of receiving. And I had thought—but never mind—that dream of heaven is gone forever."

"I am offering you my life. I revere you as I love you. Don't smile in that way, Marian! Don't—don't! I cannot bear it."

What am I, that I should strive to be better than you? I'll go away with you! You shall order my life as you will! I'll be worthy of you, never fear."

"Marian, I do believe in you. Oh, you cannot think!"—and he moved impulsively toward her, his heart in his eyes.

She raised her hand in a mute command not to approach or touch her. Her lids drooped heavily.

"Repetition is impossible. You have taught me this. I love you. I accept your conditions. There is no turning back after all. Men can find forgiveness—women, never."

The curtain fell behind her, and she was alone.

CHAPTER XI

The day was very hot; not from the moment the sun had shown his glaring eye over the horizon, but with a menace, an exultation, a defiance.

A blinding glare of sunlight poured through the uncurtained window and made a dusty halo around Mark Thorne's head where he sat writing, only stopping at infrequent intervals to wipe his brow or give an impatient tug to his damp collar.

The impatience of the flies hummed with a sleepy cadence, and even in the scratch of Mark's pen there was something drowsy and halting. At last he stopped altogether and flung it from him, rose and stretched out his hands with a yawn.

"Whew, what a day!" He plunged his hands in his pockets and looked at the packing cases, all securely strapped and bearing in bold, black characters their foreign address.

Very serious?"

Yes."

Al, the dead hopelessness of that word, not louder than a sigh. Mark's hand was on his arm quickly.

"Tell me all."

"I only meant to say goodby. Perhaps I ought not to speak of it, perhaps I should bear it alone. But God—oh, my thoughts are hell," he burst out in sudden agony, and he sprang up, his face twitching. "I took your hand when I came in. I am not fit to touch it."

These were the hardest words he had ever uttered, yet he spoke clearly and with burning self-contempt. There, with Mark's hand gripped fast on his arm, with face turned away and many pauses in the telling, the whole story was won from him.

"Now you know all," he said passionately, throwing up his hand with a hopeless gesture. "I didn't want you to go away thinking well of me. A man is the meanest thief who tries to steal what is entrusted to his care. She trusted me."

Mark stood for a moment as if incapable of realizing what the torrent of words meant.

"Don't you see? The woman I should have sustained in her good resolve I have tried to drag lower. Don't you understand? Ah, that's what hurts!" he whispered feverishly. "Oh, if you knew how she came to me, what she said, how she relied on me! My words at her mission touched her. She was to have been so true, so strong. She said I was the one good in her life. My God! Think of it! And now that is all undone. I am to blame. She loves me. We will be shipwrecked together."

Mark leaned toward him, his pale face illumined. At the first words spoken in the same, gentle voice that had won his boyish confidence Hugh's burning eyes filled with tears.

"Since you suffer, Hugh, I cannot reproach you. Your remorse seals my lips. There are men who call themselves moral who think lightly of what you have done. Thank God, you are not like them. Moments of temptation such as you have described come to all men. They have come to me; they will come to you again. Your fine sense of personal honor is wounded now. It hurts you, and that pain means hope. But it is the next affront to it which will be fatal. We'll do our best."

"But you stand halting between two paths. Which will you take?"

"I do not know."

"Hugh, look up. Look at me. You say you love this woman?"

"Beyond the telling."

"Then temptation will come to you again as surely as you both live," cried Mark, with vehemence. "Will you be strong? Will you remember there is no joy in life like that which comes from conquering self? What is life but a succession of memories? Almost in a breath today becomes yesterday, gone forever. But the poisoned recollection of guilty pleasure stays and eats into the heart. Our memories are all that last. Like travelers, they keep pace with us through life. Oh, keep them clean."

"Yes, Mark, yes," and the look upon his face wrung Mark's heart; "it is my determination to undo as well as I can what I have done. But how? Is that possible?"

"Go far away from Marian Trent. Put her absolutely out of your path. Introduce your wife to return to you. Make the most of your life. Do not hesitate, do not parley. The way is clear before you."

"That would be right," Hugh muttered, and a tremor of anguish passed over him. "Jenny to return to me—Jenny to come back. That would be right, although my heart is like stone to her. Well, I'll do it. She was senseless as a block to go away. Had she been a little merciful to that poor girl this horrible conclusion would never have been reached. But, no—oh, no! She to feel pity! The cruellest judgment woman has is woman. No need to show her a stone ready for her hand. Never fear, she will find one for herself."

"You will return and tell me the result of your interview with Jenny. Here is a key. Come, no matter how late. I will be here and waiting for you."

Hugh took it absently from the delicate, browned fingers and felt his own detained in a fervent clasp.

"Do nothing rash. Come back to me, if only for a moment, without fail. The strong are sometimes weak, Hugh, but strength can be born anew of weakness."

He was again on the sunny, dusty street, one of the passing show, a feeling like death at his heart and Mark's last words echoing in his ears. Strange thought to be thinking of such thoroughfare filled with the whirl of trade and perpetual traffic.

"Strength can be born anew of weakness."

It was the dinner hour at Mrs. Walton's as he went up the stairs and rang the bell. The hall smelled of mutton. A woman's laugh floated from the basement mingling unmusically with the chink of knives and forks. He asked for Mrs. Larremore, but gave no name.

In the room where he sat down to wait the dust lay thickly. The roll of wheels, the voices of children, came through the open window. Some music he recognized as Jenny's lay on the piano. A picture of her in her graduation dress hung on the wall opposite. The roses she carried and against which her diploma rested with girlish awkwardness had been his first gift to her.

He noted all these things with a one-sided consciousness while listening for a footstep in the hall and wondering how it would all end.

The children outside the window had grown tired of their game, and he had become familiar with every detail of the untidy place before the floor creaked under a heavy tread and a stout woman in a widow's cap swayed into the room.

Mrs. Walton had never liked her son-in-law. He had won Jenny at a time when there was every promise of a prosperous marriage to a churchgoing young man with a fortune in the coal business.

That a struggling medical student had captured her darling had ever been a thorn in Mrs. Walton's heart, even after he had vindicated himself by proving his ability to support his wife independent of her mother.

She stood in the doorway now, her breath coming in puffs, her blue eyes so like Jenny's save that they were set in a protruding framework of flesh, gleaming with anger and accusation.

"Good evening, Dr. Larremore. I thought it was you," and her tone was as icy as her short breath permitted. "I said to myself, 'That's him.' 'Nobly's him.' I know'd he ashamed to give his name.' If it ain't too much to inquire, may I ask you've come here?"

"To see my wife. I made that request on entering."

Mrs. Walton's gaze swept him from head to foot.

"Like your impudence. You took my daughter from me once, but you shan't again. Ah, had she listened to me then but there's no use going over that, only she'd be sitting in her carriage now with servants to wait upon her. What didn't she give up for you? And what did she get for it? My poor child! If you'd come when she finished telling me her story, I'd not have received you so mildly, I can just tell you. But I've thought it over, and since she's of the same mind with me you can hear the truth and go. My daughter'll never go back to you," she said, placing her hands on her knees and leaning forward.

"Never! She's done with you. You needn't try to find her or to force her. She's not in the city. Thank God, she's far away."

"You misunderstand me altogether," Hugh said quietly, unmoved by the tirade, "if you think I want to force your daughter to anything. Is it her wish to avoid me, or have you sent her away? I merely want to know her mind. I want to know if it is absolutely true that she leaves me of her own free will. If she were here, I would tell her there is no reasonable condition I would not accept. That I am to blame I freely acknowledge, though at the time she left me I did not deserve her suspicions. I want her back, Mrs. Walton; I want her very much. If she comes, I will do all in my power to make her happy, I swear."

There was none of the yearning or tenderness of a man suing for the return of a woman he loved in these words, but there was earnestness, and his sincerity was unquestionable.

A monk whose sensitive soul smarted at the memory of some sin might have asked for his hair shirt in the same spirit as Hugh put forth his plea for his wife.

Mrs. Walton rose and stared at him like a basilisk.

"I'd rather see her dead than that. Your words don't influence me. And Jenny has done with you. Oh, no! I didn't send her away. She was glad to go. Things have changed with us. My brother died last week, and Jenny has a legacy. She isn't dependent on you, Dr. Larremore; but all the same, I'll see she gets her rights."

"I wonder if you heard of it. I wonder if the money made you come seeking your lawful wife," she cried.

Anger swelled Hugh's heart, and he bit his lips to remain silent.

"Do you know what your daughter intends to do?" he asked impatiently.

"Not to get a divorce, you mean. That we do believe in it. But if she gets a separation you can't bother her. She only wants to be rid of you. She doesn't want to marry again. My daughter is like me—no two husbands for her. It's against the Scriptures. As for you"—she paused and measured him for her most spiteful shaft—"I guess from all I hear of this Miss Trent she won't mind if you don't get a divorce."

A sneer passed over Hugh's face more eloquent than words. Mark had softened his heart to womanishness. This woman warped it to steel. After all, why should he try to win his wife back? Had he not known for years they had nothing in common? Had they not really been separated since he had first felt a man's better knowledge and awakened hopes striving within him? Since she would not come, let her go. The effort to reclaim her was a sop to his conscience, but she was not worth a harder struggle. He had no desire to hear the word of ultimate ending from her lips.

He went away and aimlessly walked the streets for hours. The summer night was filled with sound. The city was awake and happy. A disinclination to return at once to Mark overcame him.

Dear, kind, patient Mark, who had slain all earthly desire, what did he know, after all, of the fierce battle raging in his heart, of the rebellion against the accented misery of his life, of the clamorous yearning of suburban youth that swept through him, demanding freedom, light and love?

Green Calves Marry.

The editor of the Oxford, Iowa, Leader, lets himself out on the marriage subject as follows: "Nine-tenths of the unhappy marriages are the result of green human calves being allowed to run at large in the society pasture without any yokes on them. They marry and have children before they do mustaches; they are fathers of twins before they are properly shod with pairs of pants, and the little girls they marry are old women before they are twenty."

"Occasionally one of these gossling marriages turn out all right, but it is a clear case of luck. If there was a law against green calves marrying, and no marrying before they cut their eye teeth, we suppose the little cusses would evade it some way, but there ought to be a sentiment against it. It's time enough for these bantams to think of finding a pullet when they have raised money enough by their own work to buy a bundle of laths to build a hen house."

The very successful group of college articles in Scribner's Magazine is concluded with Judge Henry E. Howland's account of "Undergraduate Life at Yale" in the July issue. Judge Howland has kept in close touch with Yale life from 1840 to the present day, and his article is the very essence of nearly half a century of reminiscences and anecdotes.

McClure's Magazine for July opens with an interesting account of the actual daily life in a little "Republic" where the citizens and governors are young boys and girls from the poorest and most crowded districts of the City of New York. Private industry and public functions are pursued precisely as by older people in larger republics, and neglect or abuse of encounters the same penalties as in life at large.

NOTICE OF FORECLOSURE.

Whereas, John C. Wentworth of Fryeburg in the County of Oxford and State of Maine on the seventeenth day of December, A. D. 1884, by his deed of mortgage of that date conveyed to Emory Wentworth, then living and resident of Limington in the County of York and State of Maine, and now deceased, his homestead farm and buildings thereon, situate in Denmark in the County of Oxford and State of Maine, in the County of Cumberland and State of Maine, and thus described:—A certain parcel of real estate situate in Denmark aforesaid bounded as follows, to wit:—commencing at a pile of stones at the barnyard of Moses Brown at the south-westerly corner of said parcel and the north-westerly corner of land of George H. Walker called the Jewett lot and running thence easterly on said Walker's northerly line to the Denmark and Bridgeton town line, thence northerly on said town line to the southerly line of Daniel P. Evans homestead, thence westerly on said Evans southerly line to said Moses Brown thence southerly on said pond to the place of beginning, subject to any right way thereon, and reserving all rights of burial and the right to maintain a burial lot as now enclosed on said premises, being established by a deed of one Gilson Adams. Also another parcel of land in Bridgeton aforesaid containing about three acres more or less and lies between the Bridgeton and Denmark town line on the west and the road leading from Denmark to Bridgeton on the east and land of Daniel Lowell on the north being, except a portion sold to Geo. H. Walker, a triangular parcel, said mortgage being given to secure the payment of said John C. Wentworth's note to said Emory Wentworth of even date with said mortgage for the sum of seven hundred and twenty dollars payable one hundred dollars annually with interest; and whereas as the condition of said mortgage has been broken, I in my capacity as administrator of said Emory Wentworth deceased now claim foreclosure of the same.
